I need to load into a new table in chunks, so chunks will be defined by timestamps.

Currently, I'm using Postgres 9.1, but in the future, it will be Postgres 9.3 The script I am using is something like: COPY (table) FROM '$source' Where $source is a full backup taken out of a database. There are different tables in the database, which means $source is a full backup from one day, then everything changes (some tables are deleted from another backup), and I want to keep the chunks consistent
